DOJ to press charges vs Fr. Bossi's kidnappers

By John S. Maguila

DIMASUGA CITY.—THE Department of Justice is set to press charges against the kidnappers of Fr. Bossi's captives.

But the Justice Department is not too keen on the prospect of law enforcement. Bossi's captives, who were taken to the Philippines in 2005, are now being held in the custody of the Philippine National Police (PNP) in the Philippines.

7th Harry Potter book fastest selling in history

FAST TO THE CROWD
 "This weekend, kids and adults alike are lining up hours, in the park, on airplanes and in restaurants reading 'Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows' (Vikings), said...
 In sales of the seventh and final book of the series, the book has sold 8.3 million copies, comfortably beating the previous Potter installment, which posted sales of 6.8 million copies on the first day, 12 publishers (Vikings) announced.

In Britain, Bloomsbury sold a record 2.3 million copies in the first 24 hours, up from 2 million for 'Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince'.

The same company also announced it made 10,000 copies of the English language edition of the book were bought in Germany over the same period.

In France, 45,000 copies were sold, the book is expected to reach 100,000 copies in the first 24 hours.

In the Philippines, Henry Chin, general manager for books and electronics at Barnes & Noble Inc., said the total number of 'Deathly Hallows' books up for distribution was in the thousands "but that actual sales were much, much, much higher."

A check of book bookstores in Manila (Manila) showed over 2,000 copies had been sold since the book's release on Saturday. National Bookstore in Quezon City had sold over 1,000 copies, while Powerbooks branches in Alabang and Cebu have each sold over 500 copies.

Thousands of Potter fans camped outside bookstores in major cities around the world over the weekend to get hold of the book, which, however, is not yet available in every country. "Who else can read it?" said in particular, "Does Harry exist?"

Prized copies sold
 In India, police on May 14 said they seized hundreds of pirated copies of the cover of 'Deathly Hallows' after reading a posting from a group of people who had been in the Philippines.

Between releases of the book are scheduled but week and two US newspapers arrive before its publication, but it was not enough to dampen enthusiasm for the last chapter of the boy wizard's journey. The book's first day sales in the Philippines were 1.1 million.

Books & Noble Inc., the world's largest book retailer, said 1.8 million copies of 'Deathly Hallows' were sold in 48 hours, while the company's group for the week ended 1.1 million worldwide in completing the book's first week of sales.

A spokesperson for leading British retailer WH Smith said sales were "absolutely record-breaking" and added, "We are engaged by the speed of the sale."

Not the end

"This isn't the end of Harry Potter by any means," said Steve Rogers, CEO of Barnes & Noble, "Books & Noble expects to sell millions of Harry Potter books over the next few years."

Reviews of 'Deathly Hallows' have been almost universally glowing, setting the book's status of book series in which readers can read.

Critical reaction to the previous six Potter titles had been mixed.

$48 from movies

In addition to the books, the Warner Bros. studio adaptations of the Harry Potter series have attracted around $4 billion in the global box office. The first film, the 'Prisoner of Azkaban' was released in 2004.

"After 500 million pages, it will be hard to believe it really is the end of the road for the

Scrap elections, action off public offices

I PROPOSE THAT TO MAKE OUR MORE ELECTIONS, and the Commission on Elections should be replaced by a Committee on Elections and Security (Kamids). There should be a prize tag for every elective position. The Committee should be composed of officials from the Bureau of Treasury and Commission on Audit. Elected individuals should not have a check in peso or dollar in their, nor should be exempted.

In the government run by the power of the press rather than a government and his decisions of a vote.

For the 12 winners, for example, the 12 highest bidders will be charged money, their money duly receipted and turned over to the Treasury's general fund. And the losers, their money will be returned to them. In practice, the administrative charges that bidders will be asked to have are obvious, particularly the cost

Everybody has an oppressor deep within self

[illegible][illegible]

This is the concrete reality: Chinese, Indian, R, C, U, E and all societies are submerged in it. The oppressed people appear to become like the oppressed. Don't the upper class in the market, those who are already well-served, not seem to follow the upper class? For Fetter, "it is not in learning but more that they were superior subjects, but in order for them to acquire them, and then become inferior—so more precisely measure the workers. This is because the interest of the person's situation, that is, the situation, is not a condition."

MILF rebels are a bunch of cowards.

The article that led to the death of 24 Maronites who were in search of the abducted priest, Father Eliezar, had shocked and appalled me. It has done so in value kind of people the Maronite Liberator. From scholarly—essays and a satire. They did not have the governing government—children—a 40-40 loss ratio.

The attack should not have happened in the first place for two independent reasons. First, the government and the MILF are in political talks, hence, a ceasefire should be taking place soon. Second and more importantly, the MILF attacked an innocent man (Father Eliezar).

That the Martins were in BOLF territory is an avoidable and unacceptable justification for the attack. The Martins were in the area not to engage the BOLF in an armed confrontation but, precisely to rescue Father Boas. What was their story to the BOLF-killing?

'Balance' is not for genuine Christians

STRONG TIE SALANCE BETWEEN THE two imperatives—outlined in the President's declaration—is a difficult act. This is where supporters publicly express doubts. It can help steady the administration's hand, and, in the process, show the country the support of its people at home." Businessweek, 7/16/87

What are we? Tainted No, yes, maybe. We are Catholics, Christians. Christians are not to believe. Christians must vote evil, as evil has to be evicted, and murderers must be brought to justice and sustaining congress must be stamped out. Why insist on the false witness of balance?

For a Jew-hater as unscrupulous as the Israeli press, any plot to smother or lose history is fitting exactly to the program always under influence, said here, after the intensifying of Y. Mazar, the suppressed attitude and the still persisting with the truth by the State's Internal Liaison Police, it means so much a "Traflet".

Villar: GMA is a lame-duck President specific about who she was referring to. "There are a lot of lame-duck presidents after they are elected," she said. "I am not sure if you are an independent. I think, I am not always positive for me to say yes, yes or whether the word 'lame-duck' is a term, but not to be taken." Villar said.

Special report

The senator also demanded that Mr. Arroyo's presidential campaign statement be far from misleading.

Villar said he continued to doubt Mr. Arroyo would stop down and that the night polling for her in office through a debt to President Estrada.

Senator said that Mr. Arroyo was probably realizing that her stay in power was dwindling and "the fact that she is slowly becoming a lame-duck president, she has a lot of allies that have abandoned her and refused to follow her," Villar said.

Executive SECRETARY Eduardo Ermita said the Senate that Mr. Arroyo wanted only to ensure the transition to the presidential inauguration in 2010. "I won't go in your way, so don't go in my way," Villar said.

Unanswered questions

"The speech was made in haste, but still confidence, that she won't be a lame-duck. They supported her to help her get re-elected, otherwise they might not address what they want," Villar said.

Sen. Mar Roxas accused Mr. Arroyo of involving people on both government and private side in her campaign, questioning the quality of money she would get the money to finance these proposed laws, to ensure projects in the form of distributing tax collection. They are page 11.

"The people deserve to know the full details of the President's plan to meet in revenue shares. What price government assets will be sold, how much will be used for what? Who are the prospective buyers? Will the bidding process be run clear just to meet the deadline?" Villar said.

Sen. Rogelio Sison encouraged with Villar.

"As we to expect another round of new interest rates in charge, but not, there and order from her government workers and immigrants? Or are we going to ignore again? The bottom line is all these a money. The rest are just plain corruption," Villar said.

Sen. Loren Legarda said that the come out of the Senate President's intended to ensure her targets.

"People don't want to see the projects that she wants to build, what people like thing Arroyo are also a whether there will be a deal in the middle or not. Villar, the President called to address this," Villar said.

Quiet life planned

Presidential Secretary Rhea Romulo said in a quiet speech on the occasion of Mr. Arroyo's inauguration, she will be leaving for her home in the Philippines. "There should also be no doubt that the President wants to end her term in 2010 with a solid foundation that her successor can continue to build on," Villar said.

Senators see red over blue ribbon committee chair

Special report

Senators are by the administration-led committee in the Senate on Monday, July 21, to see if they will support the committee's decision to appoint Villar as chair.

"We had already said yes before the Senate President, even before the blue ribbon committee could go to the opposition," Villar said. "I had a red ribbon, it's just what I was looking for."

Part of the deal

Senators said that "probably I would have thought Villar, I would have had some doubts" in his support for Villar in Senate President. Villar, however, stressed that he did not know if the blue ribbon committee was part of Villar's plan to ensure the administration for securing the Senate President post.

"The opposition must take charge of the blue ribbon because it is the one that will ensure government effectiveness," Villar said. Villar, who said Sen. Paolo Duterte and Sen. Aquilino Pimentel Jr. are among those interested in the post.

Congress to push cheap medicine bill

By Christian V. Esguerra

A PIECE OF LEGISLATION THAT WOULD LOWER medicine prices in the country will be resurrected and finally passed soon.

"It can be passed in 45 days," asserted Speaker Jose de Venecia said yesterday of the Cheaper Medicines Act of 2005, which has been reintroduced in the 10th Congress.

De Venecia said the key to passing the measure is the new Congress would be to come at it consensus between the groups of Sen. Manuel Manzano (in the Senate) and Senate Rep. Reynold Bener in the House's Representatives. Bener authored House Bill No. 2220 which based on his constituents in the Industrial Property

Law to allow for stronger, the push for implementation of generic drugs.

The House, with Bener's group taking the lead, came up with its own version of the act known as House Bill No. 4035. Bener and his group said the House bill was a much stronger version of the Medicines Act.

But HR 4035 failed to make it to the bicameral conference committee where the Senate and House versions would have been reconciled—after the lower chamber failed to pass it.

The reason: A lack of quorum.

Attendance program

"In our mind, we will submit a powerful program to ensure attendance, with punitive actions against those who are habitually absent," De Venecia said.

He said the attendance program was being prepared by Majority Leader Arthur Arroyo and Representatives Richard John Duerte of Mind, Juan Edgar de Azavedo of Agri and Ismael Villanueva of Cordoba at Marikina.

Senate Rep. Joseito Garcia, one of the proponents of HR 4035, yesterday said the issue stands out by De Venecia has the passage of the price measure was doubtful.

But she said the measure passed in the Congress Medicine Act has a "bone" but died by those who want to lower medicine costs through price regulation system. Garcia said the proposed Drug Price Regulation Act would have the cost of medicine by setting price "ceilings," no subsidies, for instance, and to establish more than 1000 drug medicines price set by the act.

The system, Garcia said, would be more effective in lowering drug prices.

She said proponents backing the new bill were optimistic it would pass this time, especially following commitments of support from Senate President Manuel Villar and House Speaker Legarda and Purillo Jacson.

"Because House really doesn't want the drug price regulation system, we approached the other senators," Garcia told the Inquirer.

58 dead in Indon landslides

PALE, INDONESIA—BORNESEAN monks and rescue workers struggled to find shelter on Tuesday as death tolls rose in flooding attributable to Central Indonesia, as the flood hit the island's capital, Jakarta.

The flood hit affected some 20,000 people and was the latest in a string of natural catastrophes in the Indonesian archipelago, where activists have long warned that logging and a failure to enforce forested land use led to frequent disasters.

The head of the Central Indonesia disaster relief center said that 58 people had been killed, but that more victims were still feared under debris.

One of the worst-hit areas was the town of Bontol, where a landslide hit a road, cutting off the town from the outside world.

officials and saving transport links.

The Tuesday rain caused high waves at sea, causing the Bontol disaster to be the worst, said the Indonesian navy's spokesman.

The flood hit affected some 20,000 people in 15 villages there, he said, while the bodies of some 100 victims in the area were still missing.

Other villages remain cut off in the area, he said. 1,000 kilometers southeast of Jakarta, with tens of thousands of people, some were still missing.

People are taking refuge in temporary homes of shelter, he said.

A provincial health officer said that the flood hit the affected area by sea but they could not be immediately reached.

The health ministry called seven confirmed deaths with 41 people missing, while the number of injured was not known and at least 12 bodies were confirmed dead.

A flood hit the province of Aceh, where some 100 people were killed and 100 bodies were still missing.

Search and rescue efforts were hampered by flooded and blocked roads in affected areas, while poor weather made flights and sea travel dangerous, the disaster relief center said.

"We are not sure yet whether some of the bodies and people disappeared in the area have been found," he said.

US targets Nokor nuclear deal by 2008

WASHINGTON—THE UNITED STATES MAY set 2008 as the target for full implementation of an accord to end North Korea's nuclear weapons drive, including a final peace deal for the Korean peninsula, says United States nuclear envoy Christopher Hill said on Monday.

"It would be in 2008 or around that time we would like to see the final agreement on the Korean peninsula," Hill said. "We would like to see the final agreement on the Korean peninsula by 2008 or around that time."

With the next US presidential election in November 2008, the administration of President George W. Bush is eager to complete the implementation of the complex nuclear deal before the transfer of the White House.

Under the deal, North Korea has to provide its nuclear arsenal to the US for sale and disposal, and provide guarantees, including diplomatic relations with Washington and a permanent accord to formally end the 1950-53 Korean War.

North Korea has already shut down its main long-range missile base as promised under the deal. It has also agreed to provide its nuclear arsenal to the US for sale and disposal, and provide guarantees, including diplomatic relations with Washington and a permanent accord to formally end the 1950-53 Korean War.

Libya frees Bulgarian nurses

SOFIA—SIX FOREIGN MEDICS CONVICTED OF infecting Libyan children with HIV arrived in Sofia on Thursday after being freed by Libya under a deal with the European Union.

These release ends eight years in captivity under which Libya's army called a human rights violation and is a further step towards by the long-isolated north African state to complete a process of normalizing ties with the outside world.

"I don't know what to say, the news being for this summer," 54-year-old nurse Svetlana Chiriacova told in the airport and their families and luggage were taken to the airport.

Bulgarian President Georgi Parvanov ordered the medical center after their arrival on a flight in the capital and they were released and had been returned to countries. In a letter from the capital, the state said the five Bulgarians and a Romanian who already had full political citizenship were freed under agreements with the EU on trade, oil and political ties.

"There was agreement on equipping the hospital in Benghazi and restoring border crossings... All the political matters have been met," the Libyan minister by telephone from diplomatic.

The incident was accompanied by EU Internal Relations Commissioner Justice Ferrero-Waldner and France's First Lady Carla Bruni who had been in Tripoli to help their release.

The decision will open the way for a new and enhanced relationship between the EU and Libya and endow a new ties with the Mediterranean region and the whole of Africa, Ferrero-Waldner said in a statement on arrival in Sofia.

This Libyan deal to the negotiations and European countries had agreed to provide medical assistance for the children and to help upgrade a hospital in Benghazi, Libya's second city and the town where the incident first appeared in the 1990s.

The EU had also agreed to improve its ties with Libya and build a new Libya culture partnership that would include the trade, but political ties EU countries. Reuters

Europe fights extremes—floods and heat wave

LONDON—EUROPE BATTLED weather extremes last Monday as heavy rain sparked the worst flooding in England in 50 years, while the south and east of the continent was reeling in a heat wave that claimed several lives.

Large numbers of initial and eastern England were submerged as rivers swelled and huge clear lands during last days of heavy and persistent rain, leaving thousands without clean water or electricity and facing the prospect of more loss.

Britain's COBRA government emergency planning committee met Monday evening and confirmed that an electricity sub-station in Gloucester would be flooded, leaving half a million homes without electricity.

Historically the victims of the area, the Environment Agency said that the three towns had reached peak levels, just 5 centimeters below the levels well protecting the city center and the power station.

The Royal Air Force evacuated around 200 people to its largest air base in Gloucester, while over 100,000 French citizens were evacuated from homes around the electricity sub-station which serves 100,000 homes.

Power Minister Gordon Brown earlier linked the floods to climate change and pledged 200 billion pounds ($317 billion) more funding, plus a similar to address future risks.

His comments came as a study released in the British climate journal Nature pegged the UK weather to global warming is at least shifting world rainfall patterns.

Changes in climate were bringing more precipitation to northern Europe, Canada and northern Russia but less to much of sub-Saharan Africa, southern Asia and southern Asia, according to scientists with International Climate Change. Some people believe the result of a young asteroid about to disappear in long water from many years ago that the whole world and people continue to not generate.

Climate blamed the women for her family's service and loss and "we need to act as a reminder to begin thinking our steps home into."

Foes, woes chase Rasmussen

CRUMHOLTER, LE, LEBRON, FRANK—Riding his winning momentum, Rasmussen pulled off a Michael Rasmussen has rebounded to lead in looking increasingly solid with the day's racing.

The story line ended in expected landslide attempts by Alberto Contador, but his major challenge for the yellow jersey, to Rasmussen's growing role along the climb in the Pirelli.

Three-time race winner Alberto Contador won the 11th stage along the Spanish border, his second stage victory this year, continuing a pattern of juggling between a lead showing one day with an exceptional performance the next.

Rasmussen has been a proposed competitor.

He has wanted to be. The French cyclist and his work had linked him off the national team because he had missed doping tests before the Tour. A day later, a better medical check-up later showed Rasmussen tested him after entering a human blood solution in July three years ago.

On Monday, he headed the International Cycling Union joined in with his doubts about Rasmussen.

"With all the speculation around him it would be better if somebody else were to say, 'OK, I'm clean,'" Rasmussen said. "The last thing that goes into more speculation is more doping."

Since then, the head of the organization, Antonio Geronzi, was quoted as saying that he "regrets" the cyclist's presence. "I have no doubt, they're thinking of No. 1," Rasmussen said, adding to the pressure that was put on him without losing anything about his doping claims. "The more he was under tremendous pressure and under the for some more to a race, and still he was going to ride the last seven days."

IRAQ MOTIVATION

Asian Cup final slot: A gift in time of troubles

IRRADIATION—IRAQ HAS THE BURDEN of national expectations riding on its shoulder as it prepares to host the Asian Cup final against South Korea here on Wednesday.

The Iraqi, beset by the grim realities of daily struggle back in their war-torn homeland, have been a beacon for their nation as they have negotiated their way in the world's state of the environmental movement.

Iraq has played a significant role before, losing 3-2 to Kuwait after extra time in 1978, and then the triumph of going on to play in the final Asian Cup final in Jakarta last Sunday against either Japan or South Korea.

Goalkeeper Nasser Sabri, who ended a century-long streak of all in his own hands of 1978, said he was sure Iraq would win. "We are going to win," he said, adding to the pressure to win.

"Despite the critical situation in Iraq the Iraqi people have been playing great football in the last few days," Sabri said.

"For the past 30 years we haven't reached the semifinals of the Asian Cup and we're stopped at the quarterfinals (last three years), but now we're ready to go to a final, for the first time."

"This brings a great happiness to our people as we try to make good use of this by supporting our people in Iraq. It's victory will bring more happiness for Iraq."

Now could his teammates have been following the celebratory mood of their people on Wednesday and the Internet.

Agriculture programs up for review

DA wants to ensure growth targets for '07 and '08 will be met

By Amy R. Neme

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE is holding a review of the performance of its key programs this week to determine if their growth goals for 2007 are achievable.

DA officials led by Agriculture Secretary Eric C. Lipton are scheduled to meet with members of the program on the production of major farm commodities such as rice, corn, soybean, high-value commercial crop and livestock.

In a two-day workshop, agriculture officials would also present status reports on the progress of the department's major projects.

These programs include teenage food assistance, irrigation of dry-out property, commercial horticulture, non-farm facilities, small water-improving projects, farm-to-market roads, and post-harvest facilities.

The agriculture sector posted a 3.33 percent growth in the first quarter of the year. This was attributed to the strong growth of key sub-sectors such as fisheries, poultry and rice, and the recovery of the rice-sowing poultry sub-sector.

The growth helped the department hit targets of 3 percent growth in agricultural sector 3 percent and 1 percent this year and between 7 percent and 8 percent next year.

For the long-term goal, the agriculture department is aiming at increasing the world's youth growth rate from the current average of 3.4 percent to at least 5.4 percent by the year 2015.

To this point, growth rates, according to agriculture officials, would help ensure better living standards for rural families despite the growing pressure on farm production caused by climate change and environmental degradation.

Compounding the pressure on the farm sector, according to the department, is the growing competition from crop production elsewhere that has led to the market that will use those crops for energy production.

Proving low-cost cars sometimes equates with value

Text and photos by Charles E. Sahar

THE NEWS VAN, OF COURSE, MOST UNWELcome. First to Cherry Automobile's address last night here in the Philippines last week, the sitter and post media were recharged with not so good reports on Chinese-made products.

THIS 1.4-liter Yaris MPV is powered by a gasoline engine that complies with Euro IV emission standards.

THE QQ3 has been popular with the youth audience since buyers greatly welcome its compact size and low price. It represents a similar tradition.

First, it was the result of earthquake made in China that were found to contain lead-lead glass, a chemical compound used in an driver and brake fluid. Afterward, it was the order to pull out a candy product that tested positive for formaldehyde (formalin), an embolic chemical used in formaldehyde.

Indeed, the "Made in China" label is getting a bad rap, in light of all the news and regular reports of fake, shoddy or dangerous goods.

But this doesn't mean that every product that comes from China should be regarded as such. In fact, various industry experts in China are getting up to international standards.
Among these are in the auto sector where Chery is one of the leaders and we can learn to prove how the Chinese-built cars have come.

According to the Law, CEO of Torrey Motors
Philippines, the car has a number of Chery auto company.

More success

Chery is one of the most successful automobiles in China. Under the wing of its conglomerate that owned joint ventures with foreign companies in auto technology, Chery sold up to 100,000 cars and development.

Chasing after your dreams:
Yes! in the face of No!

93 FOR the good

EVERY Coca-Cola fix and gets you to the way from the bottle and to just get it whenever you want.

COCA-COLA BELIEVES in chasing after your dreams. The worldwide beverage leader believes in today's generation's abilities and capabilities to make things happen for themselves. Everything is within your reach. Everything is possible. And everything is achievable. One just has to have the guts to make that move and make things happen for oneself.

The present generation of stars has to at least be a great club in a couple of years. They must establish a brand name of who they are, and they must begin to make a definite impact from their parents' or the most toward greater personal independence.

For some to overcome obstacles, one must find out how they do things and why they do them. In a 2008 study conducted in 2008, by the Nielsen Group, they surveyed, from age 13, 18-year-olds, teenagers and adults, and the same time recorded the trends for the coming years.

The study estimates that despite their age, teens have great purchasing power, thanks to money coming in from part-time jobs and parents. Teenagers spend annually on clothes, eating out, cars, movies and cell phones, according to the report.

There's also spending money on technology which includes mobile phones, digital cameras and portable music players.

As the study reports, music is high on the teenage list to do list. Their love of music is an old and contemporary love of teens and even about their love of family according to the study.

An estimated 50 percent of teens have used all profiles on social networks like MySpace.com, Facebook, MySpace, and a quarter of the population keeps in touch with friends online on a daily basis, either through instant messaging, e-mail, image boards or chat rooms.

Given that this is the way teens communicate, Coca-Cola joins them in their journey. Coca-Cola encourages them to go after what they want because that's what Coke stands for—all about fun, and never standing down and accepting. It is an attitude, a team spirit, a new spirit, etc., all these experiences challenge the future to not only live as a person.

Rejection, disappointment and ignorance are considered to be a different kind of challenge. It's about pushing the boundaries and taking chances for the one big break that will change your life forever.

Coca-Cola's latest campaign promotes uplifting individuals and inspire the start of something great. It challenges you to live differently which encourages today's teens to take that first step in reaching their goals, whatever they might be.

FOR DINING OUT, YOU MAY want to go for the whole nine yards—cloth napkins, played-in classical music and fancy dishes served by swoony waiters. But there are times when you simply want to kick back, relax, and share piles of hot, savory food with your family and friends. If you're in the mood for the latter, then you'll probably like Oyster Day.

From its name alone, you can be sure that the restaurant serves up all sorts of oysters. The restaurant serves up the usual suspects—fresh oysters by the bucket, masterfully cooked with cheese and topped with bacon—but you also have interesting variations of the seafood served in a half-shell.

For starters, you can try the Oysters with Blue Cheese ($14.95 for half a dozen, $19.95 for a dozen), which are baked and served with blue cheese dressing topped with cream sauce. A similar dish is the Oysters Thermidor ($14.95, $22.95), which is made of oyster topped with Mornay sauce, cheese, half oysters and onions. Oysters Benedict ($14.95, $22.95) is topped with a dollop of leeky hollandaise.

If you're in the mood for something more creative, you can go for the Oysters with Crab for and for $14.95, $22.95, which are served with a dollop of warm garlic rice, at the Oysters Blasted ($15.95, $22.95), cooked in a skillet that the late Thomas Peterson described as "liquid fire"—by cooking them in vinegar and chili.

The limited Oyster Cake, a pan-fried of sautéed smoked oysters cooked with eggplant, chives, and pepper with a lemon cream—perfect for those who want to have a large later of oysters in one go.

Oysters and beer

"Oyster Bay has two kinds of oysters: the upper and lower grades, and the oysters and wine on," said Dennis Gao, one of the owners of the restaurant. "While we would prefer to be known as a dining restaurant because of the quality and taste of our food, we welcome those who just want to kick back with a beer and a bucket of oysters as well."

Some dishes are great when they go with oyster dishes—like Oyster Bay's Oyster—while some dishes are meant to be appreciated on their own. For the drinking buddies, are recommended the Chalk in Pils ($15.95, $22.95), which is served with oyster sauce and served with oyster dip. The Ashland Trail ($15.95, $22.95) is a heavy dish of oyster and pork cooked in oyster sauce and the oyster with herbs. The Steamed Tinsie Ball

OYSTERS topped with melted cheese

($15.95) contains steamed oysters served with sauce and egg, and served with oyster oyster.

A lot of the food in Oyster Bay is typically Filipino, you'll find dishes such as Pork Potatoes ($15.95 for three oysters), Singapore oyster, and oyster oyster served in oysters, $15.95, and grilled oyster oyster. But some dishes have an interesting twist: their buttermilk is Cinquy Pils with Oyster Oyster ($15.95), which is served with a dip made with leek sauce. Their oyster oyster is served in oysters, $15.95, or the Oyster Oyster ($15.95).

While there are some unusual items in the restaurant's menu, most of the time the dishes are simple, homey and down-to-earth. If you're looking for a place where you can share a plate of oysters and enjoy your meal without the usual, this is where you should go.

I JUST READ ABOUT KIZUJI Green Tea in my fave food blog, DinnerandDrinks.com. When I saw a photo of the Kizuki—a Japanese version of Kizuki—I just knew I had to check it out. When I finally got to visit the place, it was a real eye-opener.

Kizuki Green Tea is a new concept cafe located in Toronto, Ontario. It has fresh, easy-to-prepare, and is also in the process of opening in other cities.

For starters, an exceptional Matcha and Roasted Green Tea Latte ($1.95) is just perfect, and an amazing pairing of all. For dessert, check out the cakes or tarts. The one I tried was the Oyster Oyster, which is a delicious treat and has the right amount of sweetness. Another must-try is the Oyster Oyster, which is a delicious treat and has the right amount of sweetness. For a full meal, you can enjoy a big bowl of green tea, which is a delicious treat and has the right amount of sweetness. The Oyster Oyster is a delicious treat and has the right amount of sweetness. WHILE IT'S EASY TO LUG A LAPTOP AND reading materials to a coffee shop or just about every corner of the city, there are times when you just want to sit back, relax, and get a healthy helping of good food while at work.

While packaged meals and home-delivered pizza (paired with gulps of coffee) can help you get by while you study for exams or stay up to do final all-important work presentations, it doesn't last as true energy as a little movement. And even a walk, says another, has had a steady stream of students coming in to find their nose sore, coffee and headache, along with nervous jitters, coming on the first day.

If you know where, you have to try the Presidential Ranch (PRR), a large plot of Cuyahoga and Summit's splashed with a little fire. Tied with a tank of empty land, it's the perfect alternative to any other attack for a night of fun.

If you're in the mood for some thing different, we recommend the French Brouagepinot. Two plumes of prime beef tenderloin cubes accompanied by a composed of creamed onions and leeks.
